Dear Monarchs,

I want to express my appreciation for all of your efforts in support of our students during this time of immense transformation to remote services. Today, we celebrate our great civil rights activist, Cesar Chavez. One of his quotes especially reminds me of all of your tireless efforts of the past two weeks:

We cannot seek achievement for ourselves and forget about progress and prosperity for our community...Our ambitions must be broad enough to include the aspirations and needs of others, for their sakes and for our own.

I think that this quote beautifully captures the intention and purpose that has driven us all to support and serve our students.

There is on more quote of Cesar Chavez that I would like to share with you:

Together, all things are possible.

Indeed, over the past two weeks you have demonstrated the power of coming together with unity of purpose and in support of each other.

While we will be skipping today's Campus Briefing, I look forward to seeing you via Zoom tomorrow!

Stay well,

Barry
